Background

Subsequent to the issuance of TB 18, dated February 16, 1989, the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) published a Notice in the Federal Register on May 15, 1989, (Attachment A) providing guidance on implementing the homeownership counseling requirements mandated by the Housing and Community Development Act of 1987. On November 3, 1989, the President signed Public Law 101-137 amending the Act by striking September 30, 1989, as the date for expiration of the Act and inserting September 30, 1990. As there were many inquiries from creditors regarding the new law, HUD published a supplement to its May 15, 1989 Notice in the Federal Register on January 24, 1990, (Attachment B) to clarify creditor responsibilities under the Act. It should be noted that HUD has stated that it has no explicit statutory role as interpreter of the scope of the law, and has published the supplement as general guidance only.

Notification Requirements

The creditor of a delinquent home loan is required to notify an eligible homeowner of the availability of homeownership counseling. The term “creditor,” as defined by the statute, means a person or entity that is servicing a home loan on behalf of itself or another person or entity. In question and answer 13 of the attached supplement, HUD has interpreted this to mean that the servicer of a loan, not the owner, is obligated to provide the required notice. In addition, HUD states in question and answer 14 that if an institution merely receives mortgage payments for another entity and does not contact homeowners to discuss delinquent accounts, it would not be considered a “servicer” and would not be required to send the notice. A “home loan,” by statute means a loan secured by a mortgage or lien on residential property. Therefore, any loan secured by a mortgagor’s principal residence, defined as a “one-family dwelling” which includes a condominium unit, a manufactured home (mobile home) and lot, or a cooperative unit is subject to the notice requirement. Specifically excluded by the statute are all home loans assisted by the Farmers Home Administration under Title V of the Housing Act of 1949.

Institutions should be aware of their responsibilities, consult legal counsel, and ensure procedures are in place to comply with the requirements. HUD has indicated that it will publish periodic updates to the Directory of HUD-Approved Housing Counseling Agencies. Homeownership Counseling

AGENCY: Office of the Assistant Secretary for Housing—Federal Housing Commissioner, HUD.

ACTION: Notice to home loan creditors of responsibilities under Federal law.

SUMMARY: Section 169 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1987 requires creditors of certain delinquent home loans to notify the homeowner of the availability of homeownership counseling offered by the credit agencies. For purposes of providing counseling services provided by HUD-approved counseling agencies and (where appropriate) the Department of Veterans’ Affairs. To be eligible for this notification, the homeowner must occupy the property as a principal residence and must be delinquent in his or her loan payments due to an involuntary loss of income. The new requirement applies to all home loans, except those assisted by the Farmers Home Administration under Title V of the Housing Act of 1949. Thus, both conventional mortgages and loans, and those insured by HUD or guaranteed by the Department of Veterans’ Affairs, are subject to section 169.

The purpose of this Notice is to inform creditors subject to section 169 of their responsibilities under the new law. The Notice provides a list of HUD-approved counseling agencies, thereby giving creditors the means of fulfilling their obligation to notify mortgagors of HUD-approved counseling agencies.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Robert E. Falkenstein, Jr., Office of Insured Single Family Housing, Department of Housing and Urban Development, 451 Seventh Street SW., Washington, DC 20410, telephone (202) 755-6572. (This is not a toll-free number).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Background

Section 109 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 authorizes HUD to provide, or to contract with public or private agencies to provide, counseling to tenants and homeowners of dwellings insured under the National Housing Act to help them meet the responsibilities of tenancy or homeownership. Counseling services provided by HUD-approved counseling agencies and partially funded with grants from HUD under section 109 are currently available to homeowners with HUD-insured mortgages. (The existing homeownership counseling program is administered under HUD Housing Counseling Handbook No. 7610.1 Rev., January 1976. Under HUD’s requirements, creditors of all HUD-insured single-family mortgages are made aware of HUD-approved counseling agencies and other local community agencies to which a delinquent borrower can be referred.)

Section 169 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1987 (Pub. L. 100-242; approved February 5, 1988) amended section 109 of the 1968 Act to expand the scope of HUD’s existing homeownership counseling program beyond its traditional relationship to the FHA mortgage insurance program. As in the past, grants are authorized to nonprofit and public organizations experienced in the provision of homeownership counseling, to partially reimburse these organizations for providing counseling to homeowners. “Eligible homeowners,” however, are now defined to include not only FHA homeowners, but also other single-family homeowners.

Who is Entitled to Notice From the Creditor?

A homeowner is entitled to the notice under section 169 if—

1. The home loan is secured by a one-family dwelling that is the principal residence of the homeowner.

“One-family dwelling” is a dwelling that may be divided into a maximum of four (4) separate dwelling units. So long as a mortgage remains on all of the units his or her principal residence, that mortgagor is entitled to receive notice of local HUD-approved homeownership counseling agencies. A “one-family dwelling” also includes a unit in a condominium project, a membership interest and occupancy agreement in a cooperative housing project, and a manufactured home and the lot on which the home is situated.

“Principal residence” means a residential property occupied by the mortgagor as his or her primary residence more than half the time during the year immediately preceding any notice of mortgage delinquency, or (if the mortgage is less than a year old) a residential property occupied by the mortgagor as his or her primary residence more than half of the time since the mortgage debt was incurred.

2. The homeowner is, or is expected to be, unable to make payments, to correct the home loan delinquency within a reasonable time, or to resume full home loan payments, because of—

a. A reduction in the homeowner’s income caused by an involuntary loss of, or reduction in, the homeowner’s employment, or by loss or reduction of income from self-employment or other occupational pursuits; or

b. Any similar loss or reduction experienced by any other person who contributes to the homeowner’s income.

Creditors may find it more convenient and less costly to provide the notice required by section 169 to all delinquent mortgagors, rather than to those that they first determine to meet the loss/reduction of income standard discussed above. This would not present a problem under section 169. Regarding HUD-insured mortgages, it should be noted that the requirements of section 169 are in addition to, and do not supersede, HUD notice requirements.

Finally, the statute specifically excludes from eligibility for counseling, under section 169, homeowners with home loans assisted under Title V of the Housing Act of 1949. (Title V of the Housing Act of 1949 provides loans and mortgage insurance services for rural housing and is administered by the Farmers Home Administration.)

Nature of the Notice Required

The creditor of a delinquent home loan that is subject to section 169 of the 1987 Act has two duties with respect to the delinquent homeowner:

1. The creditor must notify the homeowner of the availability of any homeownership counseling offered by the creditor.

2. Whether or not the creditor offers homeownership counseling services, the creditor must notify the homeowner of the availability of one of the following:

A. Counseling provided by HUD-approved organizations which are experienced in the provision of homeownership counseling.

B. Homeownership counseling provided by the Department of Veterans’ Affairs, in the case of loans insured or guaranteed under Chapter 37 of Title 38, United States Code.
HUD suggests that creditors of loans subject to the statute would be well-advised to inform eligible homeowners with VA guaranteed mortgages of counseling services available through the Department of Veteran's Affairs. The requirements of the statute can be met, however, by providing the homeowner with the means of contacting HUD-approved homeownership counseling agencies that are geographically proximate to the homeowner's location—whether or not these agencies specialize in counseling VA mortgagees.

Who Is a Creditor?

Under section 169, a "creditor" is a person or entity that is servicing a home loan, either on its own behalf or on behalf of another person or entity. Thus, it is the creditor's servicing functions that bring it within section 169: the actual ownership of the mortgage or loan is irrelevant. It should also be noted that the definition of "creditor" is broad enough to cover personally financed deals, where, for example, the "lender" holds a purchase money mortgage.

When Is a Home Loan Delinquent?

The statute does not provide a definition of when a loan is delinquent. Delinquency is the triggering event giving rise to the statutory obligation on the creditor to notify an eligible homeowner of the availability of counseling. HUD advises that, while there is no fixed point after late payment or default at which the statute requires this notice, it is quite clear that the purpose of the notice relating to counseling services is to assist the eligible homeowner in avoiding the consequences of delinquency—the loss of his or her property. Accordingly, to be certain of compliance with the notice requirements of the statute, notice to the homeowner of the availability of counseling services must be sufficiently in advance of any adverse action taken as a result of default to afford the homeowner time to take advantage of the possible assistance that counseling services can provide. HUD recommends that notice of counseling services be provided at the earliest point that a creditor, as part of normal business practice, communicates the fact of the delinquent status of the homeowner's account to the homeowner.

What Are the Penalties for Violating the Notice Requirements?

The 1987 Act's amendments do not provide for HUD enforcement of the notice requirements associated with counseling. HUD's role is to afford access to the directory of approved housing counseling agencies so that homeowners may realize the benefits of counseling and, possibly, avoid foreclosure action. HUD regards the obligations imposed on creditors by the new law as self-executing; that is, the law speaks directly to creditors, imposing an obligation upon any and all creditors to notify any eligible homeowner on the subject of homeownership counseling, whenever a home loan is "delinquent".

HUD believes, however, that the new law creates a legal duty, enforceable by homeowners, and that noncompliance with the law's requirements could be an actionable event that could affect a mortgagee's ability to carry out foreclosure in a timely manner. Section 169 may also be subject to enforcement under authorities administered by State and other Federal agencies. Mortgages subject to section 169 may wish to pursue this path with the agencies involved (if any).

HUD-approved mortgagors continue to be subject to HUD program requirements associated with counseling of homeowners with HUD mortgages, but the notice requirements of the new law also apply to HUD-approved mortgagees, as they apply virtually to all mortgagees. The advice provided in this Notice is fully applicable to HUD-approved mortgagees. Noncompliance by HUD-approved mortgagees could also be grounds for an administrative action by HUD's Mortgagee Review Board under 24 CFR 25.90(j).

Termination of Section 169's Requirements

The provisions added to section 106 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 that are described in this Notice terminate, under the statute's own terms, on September 30, 1988. HUD suggests, however, that creditors wait for actual notice of the termination of the statute before regarding September 30, 1988 as the date on which the obligations here described cease to exist. The possibility exists that the statute may be extended. If the requirements relating to notice to eligible homeowners of counseling services do expire, HUD will publish a Notice of that fact in the Federal Register.

The Directory of HUD-Approved Housing Counseling Agencies is published below. These agencies serve all mortgage borrowers, without regard to whether their loans are HUD-insured, and all mortgagees, without regard to whether the lender has HUD approval. HUD will publish periodic updates to this Directory in the Federal Register.

Finding of No Significant Impact

A Finding of No Significant Impact with respect to the environment has been made in accordance with HUD regulations in 24 CFR Part 50, which implement section 102(2)(C) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, 42 U.S.C. 4332. The Finding of No Significant Impact is available for public inspection during regular business hours in the Office of the General Counsel, Rules Docket Clerk, Room 1077a, 451 Seventh Street, SW., Washington, DC 20410.

Regulatory Flexibility Act

In accordance with 5 U.S.C. 605(b), the Regulatory Flexibility Act, the undersigned certifies that this notice does not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities. There is no significant economic impact on any individual entity, because it is measured in terms of the burden of requiring each lender to pass on homeownership counseling information to its borrowers. Since the duty to provide this counseling information is not limited, by the statute, to particular lenders based on their size, there is no basis in the statute for providing, in this notice, for a reduced burden on small lenders.

Executive Order 12812, Federalism

The General Counsel, as the Designated Official under section 6(a) of Executive Order 12812, Federalism, has determined that this notice will not involve the preemption of State law by Federal statute or regulation, and will not have substantial direct effects on States or their political subdivisions, or on the relationship or distribution of power among the various levels of government. The notice, which requires creditors to inform their clients about available homeownership counseling, will not have a significant impact on the States, although a State or local government, when acting as a mortgage lender, would be subject to the rule's requirements.

Executive Order 12808, the Family

The General Counsel, as the Designated Official under Executive Order 12808, The Family, has determined that this notice will have no significant impact on family formation, maintenance, and general well-being. The notice, which is intended to improve access to homeownership counseling services, should help to decrease the number of families who lose their homes... as a result of home foreclosure. This result will benefit family formation, maintenance, and general well-being. Because the requirements of the notice are based on specific statutory directions, no further analysis under Executive Order 12206 is considered necessary.

Dated: May 1, 1989.

James E. Schoenberger,
General Deputy, Assistant Secretary for Housing—Deputy Federal Housing Commissioner.

Office of the Assistant Secretary for Housing-Federal Housing Commissioner

[FR Doc. 89-3002; FR 54000-N-01]

Supplement to the Notice to Home Loan Creditors of Responsibilities Under Federal Law

AGENCY: Office of the Assistant Secretary for Housing-Federal Housing Commissioner, HUD.

ACTION: Supplement to the notice to home loan creditors of responsibilities under Federal law.

SUMMARY: HUD published a Notice on May 15, 1989 in the Federal Register (54 FR 20964) (Notice) which discussed creditors' responsibilities under section 168 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1987, Public Law 100-242, approved February 5, 1988 (section 168). This Office has received many inquiries from creditors regarding various aspects of the Law, and to resolve these questions we are publishing this supplement so that it will... be available to all creditors. (Section 169 expired on September 30, 1989, but it has now been extended through September 30, 1990 by Public Law 101-137, approved November 3, 1988.)

There are two changes to the information contained in the previous Notice published in the Federal Register. One change involves the definition of a "one-family dwelling", which the Notice defines to include "a dwelling that may be divided into a maximum of four (4) dwelling units." After reviewing section 169 and its legislative history, it is HUD's view that a one-family dwelling does not include houses with more than one dwelling unit. This is reflected in the answer to Question 6.

The second change involves the information which the creditor must send the homeowner in the notice of counseling availability. The Notice noted that specific information on counseling agencies must be included in the Notice sent to the homeowner. It has now been decided that the creditor may, instead, include in the written Notice of Default a toll-free number which the homeowner may call for specific information. The creditor must ensure that the telephone line is adequately staffed. This revised information is contained in Question 6.

OR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Robert Z. Falkenstein, Jr., Office of Insured Single Family Housing, Department of Housing and Urban Development, 451 Seventh Street, SW, Washington, DC 20410; telephone (202) 755-8672. (This is not a toll-free number.)

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: In order to respond to creditor inquiries and to clarify creditor responsibilities under section 169, the Office of Housing has prepared the following questions and answers as a supplement to the Notice previously published. HUD has no explicit statutory role as interpreter of the scope of section 169, and is publishing this document as general guidance only. We note that if a creditor's compliance with section 169 is challenged in court, the ultimate determination of the adequacy of the creditor's notification and the legal consequences of any noncompliance will be made by the Court. We also note that nothing in this information or in section 169 is intended to preclude a creditor from providing any additional assistance to defaulting homeowners that the creditor regards as appropriate.

1. Does the section 169 requirement that creditors notify delinquent homeowners of available counseling apply only if the property secures a mortgage that is federally insured or guaranteed?

No. The section 169 notification requirement applies to all home loans except those assisted by the Farmers Home Administration under title V of the Housing Act of 1949. Thus, both conventional mortgages and loans, and those insured by FHA or guaranteed by the Department of Veterans Affairs, are subject to section 169.

2. How soon do notices have to go out after a homeowner becomes delinquent?

The statute does not prescribe a time at which the notice must be sent to the homeowner. However, since the purpose of the notice is to help the homeowner avoid foreclosure, it should be sent soon enough to enable the homeowner to benefit from the counseling. HUD recommends that the notice be included in the creditor's first communication with the homeowner regarding the delinquency.

3. What is the creditor's obligation with respect to a future delinquency?

A notice must be sent to every homeowner every time the homeowner becomes delinquent. If the homeowner brings the loan current and becomes delinquent again, another notice must be sent.

4. What should be in the notices?

The notices must contain information on any counseling provided by the creditor and either the name, address, and telephone number of the HUD-approved counseling agencies near the homeowner or a toll-free telephone number at which the homeowner can obtain this information. If the security instrument is insured or guaranteed by the Department of Veterans Affairs, the homeowner may be provided with the address and telephone number of the Department of Veterans Affairs Regional Office in the state in which the homeowner resides instead of information on the HUD-approved counseling agencies.

It is not necessary that information on a specific counseling agency be included in the notice. It is sufficient to advise the homeowner that counseling assistance is available and that the homeowner should contact the creditor for further information as long as the creditor provides the homeowner with a toll-free number and the creditor ensures that the telephone is adequately staffed.

5. Will HUD be issuing a form for the notice?

No. HUD will not be issuing a form for the notice. It is HUD's view that sufficient information has been provided on the Section 169 notice requirement to enable creditors to prepare the notice.

6. Who should receive the notice?

A homeowner occupying a property covered by a delinquent loan who has suffered an involuntary reduction in his or her income or in the income of someone who contributes to the homeowner's income. However, creditors may prefer to send the notice to all delinquent homeowners, rather than attempt to determine the cause of each delinquency.

7. Are notices required for delinquent home equity loans?

Yes. Also for delinquent mortgages, deeds of trust, second liens, and any other loan secured by the mortgagor's principal residence.

However, the notice is not required property sold under a land sales contract, since title remains in the seller until the contract is completed. The property is not a homeowner until the completion of the contract.

8. Is the notice required only for a homeowner of a one-family house?

In addition to a one-family house, section 169 covers a one-family unit in a condominium, a membership interest and occupancy agreement in a cooperative housing project, and a manufactured home and the lot on which the home is situated. The homeowner must occupy the property as his or her principal residence.

A loan which is secured by only a manufactured home (mobile home) unit, exclusive of a lot, is not covered by the statute. However, a loan secured by both the manufactured home and the site is within the definition of residential property as set out in section 169.

Accordingly, the owner of a manufactured home financed by a loan secured by both the home and lot is entitled to a section 169 notice.

9. If the notice is sent and the closest agency is a significant distance from the homeowner's residence, is the creditor required to provide counseling?

The statute does not require any creditor to provide counseling.

10. If a creditor does provide homeownership counseling, should the creditor also notify the delinquent homeowner of the availability of homeownership counseling by HUD-approved counselors or by the Department of Veterans Affairs?

Yes.

11. Do creditors have to be HUD-approved to offer homeownership counseling?

No.
12. Must creditors indicate in the notices if they do not provide homeownership counseling?

No.

13. Who is responsible for sending the section 189 notice—the owner of the security instrument or the servicer?

Section 189 defines the term "creditor" as a person that is servicing a home loan on behalf of itself or another person or entity. Therefore the servicer of a loan, not the owner, is required to provide the notice required by Section 189.

14. Is a bank a creditor under section 189 if it performs specific collection services for a mortgagee, i.e., receiving the monthly mortgage payments and issuing a monthly or quarterly statement to the mortgagee?

If the bank merely receives the mortgage payments from the entity and does not contact homeowners to discuss delinquent account, the bank would not be considered a "servicer" and would not be required to send the Section 189 notice.

15. Should the notice be delivered by certified mail?

Section 189 does not require delivery by certified mail. However, the creditor should be in a position to prove the notification if the homeowner alleges noncompliance with section 189.

16. Should the notice list counseling agencies which are located near the secured property or near the homeowner if the creditor's records indicate that these are different locations?

Since the homeowner must occupy the property as his principal residence before it is required that this notice be sent, the notice should list counseling agencies that are located in the vicinity of the secured property.

17. May counseling agencies charge for their services?

Counseling agencies may charge for that portion of the fee which is not covered by grants and other subsidies received by the counseling agency. However, HUD may limit such charges and place other restrictions on counseling agencies wishing to remain HUD-approved. Section 189 does not require the creditor to assume the cost of this counseling.

18. What is homeownership counseling?

Homeownership counseling includes providing information, advice, and assistance to enable delinquent homeowners to become current in their mortgage payments. The counseling is also designated as housing counseling or default counseling, and includes every service and assistance that will help the homeowner to become current.

Budgeting, money management, arranging a forbearance agreement or plan with the bank, lender or servicer, arranging repayment plans for the payment of other debts, financial aid from local government entities, food and clothing from non-profit organizations, marital and family guidance, all are included in the homeownership counseling package delivered by HUD-approved housing counseling agencies. The intent is to increase the income of the homeowner, reduce expenses and payments on installment debts, and thereby free-up monies for the monthly mortgage payments.

19. When recommending HUD-approved housing counseling agencies to the homeowner, should creditors send the entire state list of HUD-approved housing counseling agencies, or can creditors select one or two agencies on the list near the homeowner?

Creditors should provide the homeowner with a reasonable number of choices. The homeowner needs more than one or two counseling agencies to choose from. However, the creditor does not need to provide a statewide listing if the state is very large and the listing is lengthy. If there are no HUD-approved housing counseling agencies near the delinquent homeowner, the creditor should provide a list of a reasonable number of agencies which are nearest to the homeowner. The delinquent homeowner may wish to visit those agencies even though they are some distances away, or may wish, instead, to discuss the problems over the telephone.

20. Did this law expire September 30, 1987?

Yes. However, section 189 was extended through September 30, 1990 by an Act to extend the expiration date of the Defense Production Act of 1950, Public Law 101-137, which was signed by the President on November 3, 1989.

21. Who can creditors contact at HUD for more detailed homeownership counseling information?

Secretary-Head & Counseling Services Branch, Department of Housing and Urban Development, 451 Seventh Street SW., Room 2154, Washington, DC 20410. The telephone is (202) 755-5554. (This is not a toll-free number.)
